

International Day for Access to Information

The Department of Commerce, B.A.M. Khalsa College, Garhshankar, celebrated the International Day for Universal Access to Information. The programme focused on creating awareness about the importance of universal access to information and its role in education, informed decision-making, transparency, and social development. The event provided students with an opportunity to understand the significance of having equitable and timely access to reliable information in the digital age.

The Key Speaker, Prof. Gurpreet Singh Kalsi, Head, Department of Commerce, addressed the gathering and highlighted the importance of information accessibility for students and society. He encouraged students to develop responsible information-seeking habits and to make effective use of available academic and digital resources.

The programme was organised with the support of the Principal, B.A.M. Khalsa College, Garhshankar, and the Department of Commerce. The event successfully created awareness among students regarding the value of accessible, authentic, and reliable information.
